Peace Leaders for Resilient Communities

A High-Impact Scholarship Initiative for University of Haifa

International Master's Program in Peace and Conflict Management (MA)

Background & Rationale

Across many parts of the world, war, displacement, and political instability continue to disrupt lives, weaken institutions, and threaten the possibility of long-term recovery. These realities require leaders who can understand conflict in all its complexity and help shape more stable, inclusive futures. For many talented professionals from under-resourced populations, access to this kind of advanced training remains out of reach for financial reasons.

At the University of Haifa, education is deeply connected to the world's challenges and to the responsibility to address them. We are therefore seeking philanthropic partners to fund a full scholarship cohort in the International MA program in Peace and Conflict Management for outstanding professionals from under-resourced populations. Our vision is to create a connected global community of future leaders who learn, live, and experience Haifa's academic excellence and cultural diversity together, united by a shared commitment to advancing peacebuilding, conflict resolution, and global understanding in their communities and beyond.

Program: Master's in Peace and Conflict Management (MA)

The Peace and Conflict Management program addresses the growing global need for informed, practice-based approaches to conflict analysis, prevention, and resolution. Students develop multidisciplinary perspectives and practical tools to understand the roots of conflict, navigate complex social and political realities, and support more stable and inclusive societies. The program is strengthened by its location in Israel, and especially in Haifa, a city shaped by cultural diversity and close engagement with the realities of coexistence, tension, and regional conflict. Through a curriculum that integrates academic study with internships, field trips, and real-time simulations, students gain direct exposure to conflict as both a lived reality and a field in which skilled, principled leadership can help shape more stable futures.
